

With Bloodloc™, the code on a patient's armband must be used to unlock the bag of blood before a transfusion can begin. The lock provides a mechanical checkpoint at bedside and ensures that the blood intended for one patient is not inadvertently administered to another.

